Course Goals:

This course introduces you to programs that provide an alternative approach to the traditional, punitive criminal legal system. You will not only gain an in-depth knowledge of regional, national, and international alternative criminal justice programs, but you will also meet with and learn from leading alternative justice practitioners. Over the course of the semester, you will research, design, and write a paper on an alternative criminal justice approach of your choosing. The semester will culminate with in-class presentations of your criminal justice proposals.

Course Culture:

Discussions of conflict, harm, and crime may touch upon sensitive material. Please treat the material and each other with respect. Please understand that part of law school and graduate school is gaining familiarity and comfort with new terms and concepts. Mistakes are inevitable and an important way to learn. This holds true for professors as well. Please let me know if anything I say or do causes you concern during the semester.

Course Learning Outcomes:

By the end of the semester, you will be able to:

- Understand the workings of the traditional criminal justice system and where effective alternatives fit within that system
- Identify individuals appropriate for referral to alternative programs
- Develop and present a persuasive proposal advocating for the creation of an alternative criminal justice approach
- Develop contacts within and outside Vermont with leading criminal justice practitioners

Course Expectations:

Attendance in class is mandatory. I expect you to be prepared, having read and/or listened to the assignment materials, and ready to actively participate, which includes preparing questions for the guest presenters in advance. Internet and email use during class is strongly discouraged except as necessary to access materials related to our discussions.

Each of you will be asked to introduce one of our guest presenters which will involve contacting them before class. You will also be asked to prepare questions and facilitate a discussion of the presentation during the first 30 minutes of the subsequent class.

Class meets once per week for an hour and fifty minutes. Classes will be recorded. You should plan to engage in four hours per week of outside work related to class. This will include completion of assigned work as well as additional time researching, developing, writing, and presenting your final project and paper. We will meet one-on-one at least once to discuss your paper and project.

Course Materials:

We will not be using a textbook this semester. Please read Whirligig by Paul Fleischman, available through the VLS bookstore. This young adult (short) novel will help frame our discussions. The book involves a fatal motor vehicle crash. Additional reading material is on Canvas listed by class topic. We will also have a MS TEAMS group to allow for remote presentations from our guest presenters.

Grading:

I will grade your course work as follows:

- A. Your preparation for and participation in class, including your introduction of a guest presenter and facilitation of a discussion about the presentation (10%)
- B. Your submission of a detailed proposal outline (15%)
- C. A presentation in class of your proposal and submission of any supporting materials (35%)
- E. A final paper on the alternative justice program of your creation or modification (expected length 10 to 20 pages) (40%)

I will provide further details about the proposal, paper, and presentation in a separate document.

Re: Project

You may work individually or with one other person on your project. If you choose to partner with someone you will each receive the same final grade for the paper and presentation unless some compelling reason dictates otherwise.

Your project will consist of the following components:

1. At least one planning/brainstorming meeting with me which you must schedule to be held before September 30.
2. Submission of a detailed project outline including the intended method of presenting your proposal (due by October 29). The outline should include a summary of the project, your topic headings, research and source materials consulted (or to be consulted), and intended presentation method (i.e. PowerPoint, Prezi, simulation etc.)
3. Presentation of your proposal to the class (the last 3-4 classes are devoted to presentations). You will likely have approximately 15 minutes for the presentation. (Presentation materials, if any, are due by Noon the day following your presentation).
4. Submission of the final paper (due by December 10)
5. If you are using the paper as your Advanced Writing Requirement for the JD program, I will provide comments on your paper submitted by December 10 and you will have until December 17 to submit your final AWR paper. You will need to prepare the AWR Certification form.

Your paper and presentation will be graded based on the quality of the research and writing, the depth of consideration given to your proposal, the persuasiveness of your ideas, and the timeliness of all your submissions.

Your project, product, and presentation may take a variety of forms which we can discuss. Part of your planning must include consideration of how you will present your idea to the class and/or a larger audience.

Your project may be completely of your own design or invention, or it may be a refinement, elaboration, or modification of something that already exists, assuming you provide appropriate attribution. Your proposal does not need to be Vermont specific.
