Library Access Policy

The Julien and Virginia Cornell Law Library is a law library primarily serving the research and educational needs of Vermont Law and Graduate School students, faculty and staff.

The library also provides access to selected databases and resources for the public through its Community Legal Information Center (CLIC).

Lastly, the Cornell Library is a selective depository as part of the Federal Depository Library Program (FDLP).

We reserve the right to restrict access to certain areas of the library for non-VLGS users during exam periods, times of increased library demand by the VLGS community, and for other reasons as required.

All library users must comply with the library code of conduct:

- All library users must adhere to VLGS library and campus policies and standards of professional conduct. Failure to do so will result in denied access to the library and the VLGS campus.
- Authorized service animals only – otherwise no animals allowed.
