SYLLABUS

Course Title: Environmental Justice

Course Description: Environmental justice activists and advocates argue that who you are and where you live should not dictate the conditions under which you live and how you will die. The nascent Environmental Justice Movement is aimed at avoiding, minimizing, or mitigating disproportionately high and adverse human health and environmental impacts, including social and economic impacts, on minority and/or low-income communities, and for those communities to be engaged meaningfully in the environmental regulatory agency’s decision-making processes.

This course explores the complex dynamic of environmental justice concerns which involves environmental, social, economic, public health, and political problems. The course discussion regarding the concept of environmental justice involves a comprehensive examination of US environmental laws, caselaw, history, political science, and environmental policy.

This course examines this environmental and public health problem and explores the growth of the nascent Environmental Justice Movement. It analyzes the complex mixture of environmental laws and civil rights legal theories adopted in environmental justice litigation. It examines, among other things, EPA’s Title VI administrative complaint, investigation, and resolution processes; and the quest by US citizens living in Louisiana’s Cancer Alley for a human right to a safe, clean, healthful, and sustainable environment in an international human rights forum.

This course examines the idea of an environmental rights amendment in the bill of rights sections of state constitutions as a way to ensure a safe, clean, healthful, and sustainable environment for all Americans.

Course Materials: This course will be organized around a law review article entitled, “THE SEVEN DEGREES OF RELEVANCE: WHY SHOULD REAL-WORLD ENVIRONMENTAL ATTORNEYS CARE NOW ABOUT SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT POLICY” by Professor J.B. Ruhl (8 Duke Envtl. L. & Pol’y F. 273 (1998)).

The textbook/handbook that will be used is Professor Hill’s: ENVIRONMENTAL JUSTICE: LEGAL THEORY AND PRACTICE (5th edition) (published by the Environmental Law Institute) (October 2022).

Course requirement Class participation and attendance are an absolute must and will be weighed in the final grade. Students are required to read the assigned material prior to every class and must be prepared to discuss the readings in class. Please pay particular attention to the questions posed after the assigned material.

There will be a take home exam. Class ends on Thursday, June 20th. The take home exam opens on Friday, June 30th. The take home exam closes on Sunday, July 9th. Grading begins on Monday, July 10th. Final grades will be submitted on Thursday, July 20th (Three weeks after the end of class).
